September 28-29, 2012

Professional Joy
Finding well being, pride, and engagement in your profession

Professional joy, or having a sense of well-being, pride, and engagement in your profession, is a very real goal that is experienced daily by many. Those in the healing professions began their careers with the idea of helping people live to the fullest extent possible, and to enrich their lives through service to others. Yet health care has become increasingly fragmented, frustrating, and often draining to those who receive care and give it.

Join us at the Densford International Center for Nursing Leadership’s 2012 Summit of Sages, where we will learn from the stories of five Sages and national thought leaders about professional joy and how to experience joy in ourselves and others.

 Speakers
Jane Barnsteiner
Emeritus Professor, Pediatric Nursing,
University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing

Paul Batalden
Professor of Pediatrics, Community and Family Medicine, Dartmouth Medical School

Riane Eisler
President, Center for Partnership Studies

Kristen Swanson
Dean and Alumni Distinguished Professor of Nursing,
University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill

 Sages
Linda Cronenwett
Former Dean and Beersiecher Blackwell Term Professor,
University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill,
School of Nursing

William Hueston
Professor, GFSI, Endowed Chair, College of Veterinary Medicine, University of Minnesota

Herb Perkins
Co-creator and Executive Director,
ASDIC Antiracism Study-Dialogue Circles

Connie Thach
Clinic RN II, University of Minnesota Physicians

Penny Wheeler
Chief Clinical Officer, Allina Hospitals & Clinics

 Registration pricing
Single: $295
Student: $150
Five or more: $250 (each)

For more information or to register
www.nursing.umn.edu/summitofsages