With the growing complexity of health care, advancements in technology and growing demands to deliver care in diverse settings, the need is great for nurses who can translate and drive quality improvements within health care systems and create new models of care delivery.

The Post-Masters Doctor of Nursing Practice (DNP) program is an excellent option for students with a master’s degree in a nursing practice specialty who want to achieve the highest academic preparation in clinical nursing.

The Post-Masters DNP program offers an executive model of education, which means the majority of coursework is online with three on-campus sessions in the fall and spring semesters, and two on-campus sessions in the summer semester. In all, students are required to be on-campus approximately eight times per year.

BASIC REQUIREMENTS FOR ENTRY INTO THE POST-MASTERS DNP PROGRAM

- An entry level nursing degree (e.g. BSN, BAN, Post-Baccalaureate Certificate or entry-level Master of Nursing) and a master’s degree in a nursing practice specialty from a regionally or nationally accredited institution. The nursing programs must also be accredited by CCNE or NLNAC.
- Because the DNP is a practice-based degree, applicants with generalist or nursing education master’s degrees are not eligible for admission into the Post-Masters DNP program.
- A current RN license.

The priority application deadline is November 1. After this date, DNP applications may be considered on a space available basis until March 1.
