Doctor of Nursing Practice graduates are in high demand. As the highest clinical degree for nursing practice, the DNP degree is rapidly becoming the standard for advanced practice nurses.

Why the School of Nursing?

As a student in one of the three largest DNP programs in the country, you will be exposed to a world of opportunities in nursing.

- Extraordinary mentors: Learn from caring faculty who are nationally and internationally recognized as leaders in practice, education and research.

- Vast clinical opportunities: Gain experience in a diverse array of clinical environments and learn from highly qualified interprofessional clinical experts – all carefully selected and working in partnership with School of Nursing faculty.

- Program flexibility: The partially-online program gives you the flexibility you may need to balance school, family and work demands. Students are on campus for one week every semester.

Why the University of Minnesota?

Because the Doctor of Nursing Practice curriculum is centered around building your capacity to lead, innovate and improve systems of care based on the latest discoveries, students benefit from learning at a world-class research university.

With a rich and collaborative environment for discovery, the University of Minnesota health sciences combine to form one of the largest, most comprehensive academic health centers in the nation. Our colleges, schools, centers and programs focus on educating the next generation of health professionals, conducting groundbreaking research and working together to improve health.

The Doctor of Nursing Practice program at the University of Minnesota is accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education.

The School of Nursing, founded in 1909, is the oldest continuously operated school of nursing based in a university in the country. The school’s dynamic past informs its bright future.
