What the eyes don’t see: A story of crisis, resistance, and hope in an American city by Mona Hanna-Attisha

- Paperback: 384 pages
- Publisher: One World; Reprint edition (February 5, 2019)
- ISBN-10: 0399590854

Reviews: “A stirring and personal account . . . For all her doggedness, Hanna-Attisha is a goofy, appealing, very human narrator… Hers is the book I’d recommend to those coming to the issue for the first time; the crisis becomes personalized through the stories of her patients and their parents.”—Parul Sehgal, The New York Times

“Essential for all readers who care about children, health, and the environment. This should be required reading for public servants as an incisive cautionary tale, and for pediatricians and youth advocates as a story of heroism in the ranks of people who have the capacity to make a difference.”—Library Journal (starred review)

Author Biography: Mona Hanna-Attisha, MD, MPH, FAAP, is a physician, scientist, and activist who has been called to testify twice before the United States Congress, awarded the Freedom of Expression Courage Award by PEN America, and named one of Time magazine’s 100 Most Influential People in the World.
